

The way you buy and access software is changing

New perpetual licenses of most individual Autodesk products will not be available for purchase after January 31, 2016.

The way you buy software is changing

What's changing?

Autodesk is gradually transitioning new software purchases to subscription options only. New licenses of perpetual software products will not be available for purchase after the following dates:

January 31, 2016 – Most individual products

July 31, 2016 – Most Autodesk Design & Creation Suites and additional individual products

These products will continue to be available via Subscription. Desktop Subscription is now available as quarterly, annual, 2-year and 3-year plans.

What's not changing?

Customers who already have perpetual licenses or who purchase perpetual licenses while they are available will be able to continue to use them, and those with Maintenance Subscription will receive corresponding benefits for as long as the Maintenance Subscription remains active.

Why are things changing?

The majority of customers have already shown a preference for Autodesk Subscription options. This also aligns with industry trends for software delivery and cloud based offerings.

What is Autodesk doing to ease the transition for customers?

- Providing adequate advance notice of upcoming changes to help give the time needed to assess options and make plans
- Offering Maintenance Subscribers the ability to continue to renew and receive/access the benefits of their Maintenance Subscription
- Providing the ability to lock in subscriptions rates by introducing multi-year Desktop Subscription options
- Providing Autodesk Account as the one place to manage all products, subscriptions and services
- Continuing to offer Autodesk Design and Creation Suites perpetual licenses
